Re: SNAP: Clarification on Verifying Dependent Care Transportation Costs

Overview

In response to feedback received from staff, two new examples have been added to the Online Guide Dependent Care Expense - Examples page.

The first example clarifies that a written self-declaration is sufficient for verifying dependent-care-related transportation costs that are not based on the federal mileage rate. Examples include the cost of a van service, Uber or public transportation. Like the self-declaration for verifying actual dependent care costs, the self-declaration for verifying dependent-care-related transportation costs must be in writing, i.e., handwritten or typed.

The second example clarifies that a client may be credited with transportation costs related to dependent care, even if the client does not specifically incur costs for the care of a child or adult.

Regarding dependent-care-related transportation costs based on the federal mileage rate, staff are reminded that if a client drives his/her dependent to a care provider for dependent care purposes, the client's verbal self-declaration of the care provider's address and the frequency of the trips to that address is be accepted, unless questionable.

Purpose

This Transmittal advises staff that two new examples have been added to the Dependent Care Expense – Examples page to provide clarification.
